

Editor's Note

Academic Canvas: An International Journal of English Studies has been conceived as an online platform of exchange between researchers, educationists and practitioners of English language and literature. The scope of the journal ranges from literature to theory, from Linguistics to teaching of English as a second language and pedagogical concerns. Aimed at an extensive international audience, the journal seeks to evoke resonances across cultural, social, political and economic contexts, and understand the dynamics of English language and literature as an interface of classrooms across the world.

The impact of latest technologies and social media on emergent literary forms is a special area of concern, and the journal would be a keen observer of the evolving course contents across institutions of higher education and universities.

We feel pleasure in bringing out this volume of Academic Canvas in which we have made an effort to provide a platform to our fellow colleagues, scholars, writers and students to share their insightful ideas and research worldwide. We assure our readers to do better in the upcoming issues. Your encouragement and suggestions will definitely help us improving the current endeavour.
